

主旨: there's a limit to everything.

Hi, to whom may concern,

Or, are you concern at all? Since I was a child (20-30 years ago), I learned that HK is a tiny little place but with way too many people. Many, many times I have heard of people saying HK would sink one day, because of over-populated. All along, I thought it's a myth, until recently. I realized that it's not, HK government is really trying to make this happen. Since July 1979, there are 54,750 new immigrants from mainland China per year, that makes around 784,000 newbies live in this tiny place. Yet, Ms. Carrie Lam has said more than once in those public hearings that, there's no limit for how many mainland China immigrants to move to HK. How can this not be planned to make HK sink? It's not happening slowly, yet, with nearly 55k people a year, and the land would not GROW bigger, HK would eventually sink. Thank you for making my childhood nightmare come true.

Moreover, it seems HK gov is trying to get senior citizens to move back to China to live. Without HUJI in China, senior citizens would not able to get any welfare from China gov (or local gov). Do you expect those seniors to travel to HK often for their medical and other needs?

China is also experiencing with Population ageing, therefore, they are allowing family to have more than one child under certain limitation. Since China is also having such kind of problem, why is HK sending seniors to China and allowing so-called younger Chinese to immigrate to HK? That's a big conflict for both China and HK's interest. Why did I say so-called younger Chinese? The mean age of those so-called younger Chinese is around 40 years old. In the usual standard, 40 years old is not really YOUNG, unless you redefine 40 is the new 15. If so, I shall thank you for making me a child once again.

Please take in account that city planning, citizen welfare, everything are related to population. Sadly, I don't see HK gov has been thinking for HK citizens. Stop saying that Chinese immigrants are not in control of HK gov, according to BASIC LAW ARTICLE 22

*For entry into the Hong Kong Special Administrative Region, people from other parts of China must apply for approval. Among them, the number of persons who enter the Region for the purpose of settlement shall be determined by the competent authorities of the Central People's Government after consulting the government of the Region.

The Region would mean HK, if you need further prove, please read the Chinese version. Stop making a fool out of yourselves. The world is looking at HK and see HK as the bitch of China, just bend over whenever China wants. It's very typical that when a person immigrate to another country, they would get screening, usually, if that person convicted of a felony, there pretty much no chance for that person to immigrate. Yet, HK, the very international, highly-developed city has shown that's not the case, especially if guilty party is from mainland China. Shi Junlong, Convicted Murderer of HK Immigration Bldg Arson Case, Becomes HK Resident. I feel sorry for Leung Lam-Kwong, HK gov doesn't have his back. His death is meaningless to the HK gov. Once again, HK gov is just bending over for Chinese gov. Have some backbone, stop being other's bitch.

I have typed long enough, I typed this email, is hoping that I can still respect you, respect HK gov. Stop bending over for China, and stand firm to support HK people, not new HK people.

Sincerely,
Sibyl Wong
