

主旨: retirement age

The population policy consultation document is vague on extending the retirement age which is currently generally age 60 in Government.

This is a "quick fix" option and I strongly suggest that the Government announce concrete measures asap for extending retirement age in the Civil Service, say to age 65 initially, to encourage similar participation in the private sector. There is no obstacle for Government to take the lead in extending retirement age, immediately. There is no need for extended consultation on this matter, which is a common "tool" used in most developed countries.

Stuart