Using the Silicon Valley Mentality to tackle the Population Problem of Hong Kong

Lion A: "Please continue."

Lion B: "The Chinese Mentality is to be humble at all times. It is very different from the Silicon Valley Mentality. For example, most Chinese Scholars will study the Government Consultation Document very carefully and give it every benefit of doubt. They would say that much work have been done and that the Government already have a good handle of the problem. Many will content to stay quiet."

Lion A "What would the Silicon Valley Mentality Lions think?"

Lion B: "Everything is third class. Even though much work has been done, the Document is not sufficient to provide a solid foundation for planning. Here are the additional points:

(1) For the proper modern technique in discussions, the Government should also set up a moderated forum at its website. Discussions can start immediately without waiting for the deadline in Feb, 2014. Through constructive multi-way discussions, much more can be achieved.

(2) To have proper moderation, there can be one or more unmoderated forums for anybody to express his opinion. Some of the useful discussions can then be promoted to the moderated forum.

(3) Note the use of the term 'multi-way' discussions. Many parties can participate in the discussion on the worthwhile topics or suggestions within minutes. This is much better than collecting tons of comments and then try to organize and deal with them at the end of the consultation period."

Lion A: "This particular comment is important enough to feedback to Government immediately. The email will be sent immediately."
