Claiming Hong Kong population capacity is without a limit is ridiculously unrealistic. With Hong Kong becoming a much crowded place. The incoming 150 population from Mainland China is a modern day ethnic cleansing activity. It's true that some of them might be hard working individuals but with such a low quality workforce. It is completely meaningless to rely on them to build the future of Hong Kong. Taking back the right to grant the "one-way permit" is a must to ensure the incoming mainlanders are young, willing to join the work force with a good background. Recent news of a housewives who is charged to money laundering dare to escape from Hong Kong leaving the 30 million Hong Kong dollars bail suggest the mainlanders background are often complicated and would have involved in criminal charges beforehand. A complete background and financial check is necessary to ensure they are men with integrity and be able to join the workforce.
