Honestly to me and my friend and all I heard around me, it seems the much crowded HK to be the less of us are willing to stay here for living. Personally I can understand the view of absorbing more people from mainland or other places to refill talent, manpower, wealth and consumption power for this getting elder city please...admit that this city do has its capacity... and to many of us driving economies growth is a target but not the only and most important target of our government, we do need a government capable to maintain our living standard (not only money but also hygiene, social harmony, career diversity... and so on). Personal view suggests

- 1) government fix a population ceiling for HK...by then 1 in should come with 1 out (natural or migration way), single-way admission from mainland quota should be under this constraint as well;
- 2) new immigration scheme, only highest scorecard applicants will be granted (for the scorecard it depends on talent that suits HK development and prioritized industries, age, male/female ratio and so on...)
- 3) scholarship for other countries (Singapore, Malaysia, Japan and Mainland) for top students, those granted scholarship has to commit for period to HK after graduation.
- 4) and this is the most important thing, to regain the examination of immigration application (even from Mainland), even not full control immediately please come up a schedule.
