1: Govt should take to lead to promote the idea of job sharing - 2 persons sharing one job. There are a lot of people now working full time (mostly females) who would like to have more personal time whilst still wanting to stay on work. Or those who cannot afford to have a full time job due to other commitments, have to leave their jobs totally. So some are extremely stressed out due to work, and some are also quite tensed due to low family income.

As Govt is the largest employer, should consider taking the lead to promote this idea as it can increase the work force and enhance the work-life balance. If the personal lives of hk people are well balanced, it will automatically ease a lot of social problems. Plus if the job becomes less demanding in terms of shorter hours per week, likely more civil servants beyond the normal retirement age will accept to work beyond age 60.
