I am working in IT area. And got a plenty of friends are unemployed even the economic environment is not very poor. The number of position in this area become less and less due to the firms continue outsource the role another country. Even the positions are in HK, the firm will hire oversea staff instead of local staff. I think the government should strictly assess every application, even those internal oversea transfers. Those company may continue reject those local candidates and claims that they are not fully fulfill their requirements. It is very easy for them to find some excuse to reject local candidates. And actually they not willing to give chance to those local candidates to fill the position with similar skill set. It is quite difficult for local technical staff to survive in current environment.
